LAW PROHIBITS TIME EXTENSION FOR AUTO FEES

Fact, not threat, should bring California motorists to realization they must obtain 1936 registration number plates prior to midnight January 30 or pay 100 per cent penalty on vehicle license fees.

"This is the first registration renewal period in which the state is operating under a vehicle code that definitely sets a time limit for collecting fees," explained Ray Ingels, director of motor vehicles, in warning motorists there can be no extension of time for obtaining plates without payment of double fees.

All California Highway Patrol offices are registering vehicles to augment service of department of motor vehicles offices and automobile clubs, and Ingels has ordered each office to remain open until 5 p. m. Saturdays during renewal period.

INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION WILL REOPEN SOON

February 12 Is Date Set For New Start Of San Diego Fair

Lincoln's birthday, February 12, will mark the opening here of the $36,000,000 California Pacific International Exposition. Last year's attendance record of 5,000,000 visitors is expected to be greatly exceeded.

Located in San Diego's 1400-acre Balboa Park, world-famed beauty spot, and only 14 miles from romantic Old Mexico, this great world's fair celebrates almost four hundred years of colorful history.

Several thousand workmen are busy re-landscaping and replanting the extensive gardens of the exposition. A complete new lighting plan, casting "mobile" rays of colored lights on buildings and trees will use more than 4,000,000 watts of electric power each hour, transforming the exposition grounds into one of the most beautiful night spectacles ever created.

More than 100 exhibit palaces of Spanish Renaissance, Spanish Colonial and modernistic architecture form the heart of the fair.

In the Palace of Electricity will be displays of all types of household appliances powered by electricity. Old masters and modern art will be exhibited in the Palace of Fine Arts, and the Palace of Natural History will trace the history of man's progress in that realm. Foods and beverages, photography, federal governmental activities and better housing programs, with a specially built $150,000 Federal Housing exhibit, will be seen in individual palaces.

Great symphony concerts in the 4000-seat Ford Bowl, presenting leading orchestras and sponsored by Henry Ford, will be the highlight of a musical program featuring more than 69,000 musicians during the season. 'Roads of the Pacific,' composite highway of sections of famous roads in countries bordering the Pacific ocean, will again be presented by Ford. Last season over half a million persons rode in modern motor cars over this unique highway.

The history of transportation will be shown in the $2,000,000 Palace of Transportation, with relics from the Ford museum at Dearborn as the centerpiece. Other exhibits will be shown by leading railways, steamship lines, bus systems and air lines, depicting the progress of travel from ox carts to modern streamlined vehicles.

Strolling troubadours, dressed in gala attire, will revive the spirit of Spanish California with lilting melodes and pretty grls.

Vast flower and cactus gardens, with riotous colors of many blooms, will vie with splashing fountains, limpid pools, groves of palms, eucalypti and other graceful trees as beauty attractions.

This vivacious senorita and her clicking castanets will be featured on the Mexican program during the gala reopening, February 12, of the California Pacific International Exposition at San Diego.

GIVES RIDE TO TWO HITCH HIKERS AND PASSES OUT

San Francisco Insurance Salesman In Harrowing Experience Saturday

Elmer Scheu, 29, of 1464 Fifth avenue, San Francisco, an insurance salesman, was brought to the Villa Sanatorium, last Saturday evening in a critical condition.

The victim was in an unconscious condition when his body was found as it lay sprawled across a seldom used dirt road near the Chinese Cemetery in Lawndale. He is believed to have been a victim of robbers.

The man's hat and shoes were missing and fresh tire tracks indicated he may have been thrown from his own automobile in which his assailants fled from the scene.

San Francisco police joined San Mateo County authorities in an intensive search for the missing car and the supposed highwaymen. The car was later found abandoned in the Richmond district of San Francisco.

According to his mother, Mrs. Len Scheu, he left his home Friday night to collect insurance premiums.

It is reported that Scheu picked up two hitch hikers, Saturday afternoon, in the vicinity of the Cliff House on the beach. The men insisted he take a drink from a bottle which one of them carried. It is presumed the contents contained poison and that after drinking the victim lost consciousness.

After being treated at the sanatorium, Scheu was sent to his home, Sunday, where he is now undergoing treatment by the family physician.

PLAY FULL OF ACTION COMES TO LOCAL HOUSE

Doctor Seeking Rest Runs Into Bandits And Adventure

"Dr. Socrates," the Warner Bros. production in which Paul Muni will open at the Daly City Theater for three days, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, January 26, 27 and 28, is heralded as one of the most powerful dramas in which that star has appeared on the screen.

Muni, in the role of a once famous physcian whose nerves have been shattered by the death of his fiancee, tries to bury himself in a small town. In this he is successful until one night a notorious bank bandit forces him at the point of his revolver to dress a wound he had received in a battle with police.

The bandit and his band terrorize the surrounding territory, rob the bank and shoot up the town. Among those injured is a girl who had leaped from the bandit's car.

Muni, who has been dubbed Dr. Socrates by a blustering country doctor, a part played by Robert Barrat, dresses the girl's wounds and takes her to his home.

That same night Dr. Socrates is again held up and taken to the robber hide-out to dress wounds. He recognizes the place, calls for government agents, and by a ruse throws the bandits off their guard, so that the secret service men and their posse are able to capture the stronghold without blowing it up and killing the kidnaped girl.

Ann Dvorak plays the part of the little hitch-hiker with whom Muni falls in love.

"Hands Across the Table," with Carole Lombard and Fred McMurray, is the second attraction.

The monthly board meeting will be held on Tuesday, February 11, in the P. T. A. room. There will also be sewing in the afternoon.

DON'T KNOCK! JUST BOOST!

The worth while man or woman never gets unduly excited when everything does not go just as they think it should.

Even though you consider yourself a "big shot," or have been the "king pin" in a community for a long time, don't get "jittery" as soon as some other citizen advances an opinion contrary to your own.

Don't become jealous or suspicious of every fellow who has a progressive idea, even though your own brain was unable to conceive the plan.

Try to be progressive at all times and work for the betterment and improvement of the community in which you reside. If you can't do that, you are a poor sport and no asset to any city. Remember, anybody can be a grouch!

Don't knock! Just boost!

BIRTHDAY BALL PLANS FORMED

Program On Countywide Basis Urged By Committees At Local Session

Plans for a countywide President's Birthday Ball, January 30, were being made today with direction centered in Burlingame following a meeting at which committees were named.

Mr. and Mrs. David Lamoreaux of Burlingame and Mrs. Robert McWilliams of San Mateo head the general committee composed of city and county officials and prominent civic leaders.

"Political party affiliations are being forgotten by citizens who are striving to make the President's birthday ball a success," Lamoreaux stated, "because every one is aware that moneys derived from this affair will go to a worthy cause."

It was cited that 70 per cent of the proceeds go toward aiding county health authorities combat infantile paralysis. The other 30 per cent will go toward aiding the nation's infantile paralysis victims.

TANFORAN BABY RACE DRAWS WIDE NOTICE

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Rudyard Kipling had the knack of bringing off witty aphorisms that promise to endure over the years. His "East is East and West is West, never the twain shall meet," hits the nail right on the head. The summing up of the human scene is not only remarkably succinct, but true. There is a difference between the races of the Occident and the Orient that probably will never be wiped out.

When it comes to the contests out on the oval it is another story, considering things in a limited way. We all belong to one division of the human family in this country and there is no reason for the least bit of disharmony, especially in sport. So it happens New York is assisting California in anything that develops the thoroughbred breeding industry.

A specific instance of assistance comes in the ready response of the Fasig-Tipton Company, of New York, to a request from the Tanforan organization for a "lift" in exploiting the Tanforan Futurity, to be run for the first time in the fall of 1938. Asked for a list of names and addresses of leading breeders, outside of California, E. J. Tranter, president of the New York sales company, lost no time in not only forwarding the list but offering encouragement in the task of getting nominations.

The Tanforan Futurity is the first "universal" stakes of the early closing kind to be instituted out this way. There are some early closing stakes at present, but each of the features—the Lassie at Tanforan, the Home Bred at Bay Meadows, and the Champion at Santa Anita—is exclusively for two year olds foaled in California.

The Tanforan Futurity is for two year olds from any state, and, for that matter, any country in the world.

PRESIDENT IS ACTIVE IN MOST HUMAN WAY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

President Roosevelt has done many things that will live in history. He is not finished yet by any means and it is our firm opinion he will keep right on putting the national house in order for another four years, following the windup of his first term at the White House.

Conservative critics have the idea that history will regard the Tennessee Valley Authority as the outstanding achievement of the Roosevelt administration. The Authority placed the President Roosevelt of these years right alongside the President Roosevelt of other years, as it is well known Theodore Roosevelt was a fighter for social justice. The Tennessee Valley Authority is one of the largest experiments in social planning ever started anywhere; it embodies all the latest notions for giving the average man a chance in life.

The Tennessee Valley Authority is a federal agency set up to reorder the topography and the economic and social conditions in the drainage basin of one of the great river systems of Southeastern United States. In the area is a population of 2,000,000 persons. The welfare of the people who live in the area is an important part of the vital program, as it devolves upon the TVA to bring education, employment and social rehabilitation to pretty much depressed classes of the district.

The Authority was established primarily as a system of flood control, but one of the byproducts of the huge reservoirs being built is electric power. There comes the rub. What "Teddy" Roosevelt termed "malefactors of great wealth" and what Franklin Roosevelt denominates "entrenched greed"—but the same old crowd—have challenged the right of a government agency to sell electric power. So the case has gone to the United States Supreme Court.

The Tennessee River, as one of the main tributaries in the Mississippi Basin, not only helps to swell the floods that devastate the lower Mississippi, but it is also subject to disastrous floods in its own valley. Flood control on the Mississippi, one of the biggest problems this country has to face, resolves itself ultimately into flood control of the tributary streams. Huge amounts of electricity are made available by impounding water in flood control dams and President Roosevelt rightfully is battling with all his might for the sale of that electricity.

President Roosevelt, as has been pointed out before in these columns, is eager to demonstrate the economies of federal government operation and to hold up TVA electric power charges as a "yard stick" for the rates that should be charged by private undertakings. A tremendously worthy object in itself.

In the event of the opponents of the great project being successful in having it declared unconstitutional its advocates see two possible outs. First, legal objections would be overcome by the passage of new enabling legislation. Human consideration would not allow the dropping of the project on account of the opposition of "entrenched greed."

A second point is that in the event of the federal government being balked in the distribution of electric power and forced to sell it, if at all, to private systems for distribution, the electric power is really a minor item in such a vast project.

Even at this early day the TVA activities employ 17,000 persons. Among the activities are extensive demonstration farms, model dairies, training schools in handicrafts for the general population, building of model housing projects for workers and educational, medical and other services for the entire region.

It is social pioneering in a big way. I say with all the emphasis possible: MORE POWER TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY.

AUTO LICENSE TIME LIMIT ENDS ON JANUARY 30

Explanation Of Procedure And Places Where Plates Are Obtainable

Each day is now reducing the narrow margin of time remaining before the deadline is reached for renewing automobile registration and securing new license plates for 1936. End of the period is fixed by law as midnight, January 30, when delinquent penalties will go into effect doubling the amount of new license fee based on car valuation. This new fee is in addition to the regular $3 registration fee and is in lieu of personal taxes on registered motor ve hicles hereafter.

Motor car owners who have delayed applying in order to await action by the State Supreme Court in test cases on constitutionality of the new fee and the question of veterans' exemption no longer have this reason for postponing application. The court handed down rulings last week whereby the law remains in effect and veterans are declared unable to apply exemption rights to the new fee. The fee was held to be a privilege tax for use of the highways and not a property tax to which exemption claims could be applied.

The new license fee is at the rate of $1.75 per $100 of valuation and the penalty doubling the amount for delinquent applicants will be a heavy one on many cars. This fact is expected to influence most car owners to make application safely in advance of the deadline hour.

Plates are being issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles at offices in various principal cities, with mail applications receved at the Sacramento office. They are also being issued at offices of the California Highway Patrol. The California State Automobile Association is issuing plates to members at offices in thirty-three cities of northern and central California.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF STATION FOUR

Members Meet And Eat And Have Merry Time Saturday Night

The officers and members of Station No. 4, Daly City Fire Department, held their annual banquet on last Saturday evening in "Little Italy Hall."

The tables and hall was prettily decorated with acacia blossoms by Assistant Chief Bodien. At 9 o'clock the members and guests sat down to a well served dinner and enjoyed themselves in getting acquainted and eating.

REGULAR MEETING OF CROCKER P. T. A.

Crocker Parent Teacher Unit held its regular meeting in General Pershing School, Tuesday of this week. An executive board meeting was held before the regular session. Mrs. Bernadine Lewis presided.

The attendance was small, but it was an interesting meeting for those present. All business was finished prior to our moving into our new outstanding quarters in the Crocker School.

Mrs. J. E. Walker, a past president of Crocker and chairman of thrift in the Seventeenth District, gave an interesting paper on "Thrift in the Home" and the necessity of a budget for small incomes.

Plans were completed for the Founders Day meeting, which will be held in the assembly room at Crocker School, Tuesday evening, February 11, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Nora Clifton, junior past president, will have charge of the arrangements for that evening. An interesting program is being arranged and we hope for a large attendance, as this will be the first meeting in our new school.

Several members attended the district meeting at Burlingame High School on Friday last. The next district session will be held in Sequoia High School at Redwood City. This will be the Founders Day meeting of the district. A large delegation are planning to attend from Crocker, as this is the most interesting meeting of the year.

The Study Circle will meet at the home of the president, Mrs. Lewis, on next Tuesday afternoon.

After an interesting business meeting dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

Garth himself was ready to quit when, in the twilight, they came down to where the steep pitch eased off on a small patch of tundra. He opened his pack and spread the blanket on the dry gravel in a hole under a pile of boulders.

At sight of the fat with the frozen caribou and smoked moose meat in the pack, Lilith at once gathered dry moss. This time the raw caribou flesh was seared over a fat-fed fire of the moss before being eaten. After the meal, Garth opened the gold-mounted cigar case and handed one of the Havanas to its owner.

Mr. Ramill hastily bit off the end and lighted the cigar in the flame of the fat and moss fire. As he put it to his lips he hesitated, then, with a perceptible effort, he turned to offer it to his daughter.

"Uh—ladies first, my dear."

Lilith started to thrust out her hand. Something seemed to catch it. She glanced at Garth and stood up.

"You need it more than I do, Dad. Good night, everybody. I'm dog tired."

Her father and Huxby looked at each other in astonishment. Garth was less surprised. He smiled to himself as he put more moss and fat on the fire and coiled up beside it.

The short nights were already getting longer and darker. When wakened by the chill of midnight, Garth saw Huxby lying on the other side of the fire hole. The fire had burnt out. He built a new one. As its small flame lightened the darkness, he saw the half-inch stub of the cigar clutched in Huxby's fingers.

Before sunrise, Garth was again awake. He filled the little pot with ice and set it in the edge of the rebuilt fire, then began cooking caribou meat. The others wakened almost too stiff to move. But all managed another big meal of the meat. To top it off, Garth had Lilith boil a little tea in the water from the melted ice.

After the hot drink, even Mr. Ramill managed to hobble down the now fairly easy slope. The exercise gradually warmed and relaxed stiffened muscles.

The end of a long day's hike at last brought the party down the miles of tundra slopes to the edge of timberline. There was no trail—none at least that the city dwellers could detect. Time and again Huxby declared that Garth was lost no less utterly than the rest of them; that he was wandering at random. To silence the caviler, Garth began foretelling small landmarks before they came into view. This at last forced the engineer to realize that their guide was following his former trail through the forest maze as surely as if it were a beaten path. The most positive proofs of all were the mounds of dirt-covered ashes where Garth had smothered his camp fires going to the lost valley and returning from it to the Mackenzie.

He predicted they would reach canoe water on the seventh day. But during that morning Mr. Ramill turned an ankle. Even after much soaking in a cold spring and tight bandaging by Garth, the sprain held the millionaire down to a slow hobble. An aspen staff enabled him to travel slowly until the noon meal. After that the pain overcame him. He refused to move.

Garth looked doubtfully at the none too large supply of food that was left. His pack now weighed little more than the platinum alloy in Huxby's wolfskin knapsack.

He had allowed everyone to eat without stint. That had been necessary in order to keep up the strength of the chechahcos. But, as he had foretold, the country was barren of game. There was none too much meat left in his pack.

"If you can't carry on, Mr. Ramill, you'll have to stay here and keep bathing your ankle in this rill," he said. "We're too short of food, though, to wait any time. The stand of birch at the stream is so small that I'll need a full three days to build our canoe. The three of you follow down this brook as soon as you can."

When he picked up a few pieces of meat and the rifle, Huxby spoke: "I should have the gun to protect Miss Ramill."

"There's nothing here to attack you," Garth replied. "Just possibly, I may find game at the stream."

"Could another pair of hands be helpful in making the canoe?" Lilith asked.

"Well—yes."

The girl looked at Huxby. He did not speak or move. She stood up. "Dad, you'll be all right with Vivian. I am going to help Alan."

Her father shook his head. "You should stay here with me. Let Vivian go."

Huxby rose, frowning. He looked at Garth with cold rancor. "I see no need for anyone to go. I certainly cannot permit my fiancee to accompany you."

"She might have helped. You'd be only a hindrance," Garth replied.

He swung away at a rapid pace. But behind him he heard the girl speak sharply: "Don't be silly, Vivian. Get out of my way."

After that came a quick patter of moccasins. Garth kept on for some distance as if he did not hear the sound. Then he halted behind an alder thicket to face the girl. She was so close behind that she almost ran into him. He smiled into her eager eyes.

"This is a happy surprise, Lilith."

Her eyelids sank, and her cheeks crimsoned under their coat of pitch-and-grease mosquito dope. "You needn't fancy I'm running after you. It's—it's only because I want to get out of this beastly North country of yours—and be rid of you, too!"

"So that's it. Well, you're a good hater, but you're a real sport. You're game. Tag along, if you wish."

He set off again at a pace twice as fast as the best her father had been able to travel. An occasional snap of a twig behind him told that the girl was still following. Yet he did not once slacken his gait or look back until, three hours later, the brook began to meander through a stretch of muskeg.

At the edge of the swamp he stopped beside a game trail. Lilith came up beside him, breathing deeply from the long and rapid walk. He pointed to the big water-filled hoof prints in the mud.

"We may be in luck. Moose passed here yesterday—the water is clear in the tracks. They may not have gone too far. Stay here, or be quiet."

An uptossed leaf showed that the wind was in his favor. He started along the trail. The tracks were still a day old when they turned out into the muskeg toward a lily pool. A mother swan and her brood of cygnets were swimming around the lily pads.

Garth skirted on along the border of the swamp to where a bend of the stream twisted in close to dry ground. Here was the grove of birch of which he had spoken. He pointed to the fringe of willows below the birch.

Those bitten twigs—still white. They've been eaten off less than an hour ago. Stay here."

After another test of the wind, he went ahead alone, silent as a lynx. Luck was with him. As he rounded the bend he saw the immense antlers of an old bull moose rise above the willows on the bank. Before the startled beast could plunge into the water Garth dropped him with a bullet through the brain.

At the crash of the shot, three moose cows with calves broke cover beyond the bull. The distance was considerable and brush obscured Garth's aim. He had to shoot four times to bring down one cow and her calf. But that was enough.

His shout brought Lilith on the run. She looked delightedly at the bull. "Oh, no chance now of starving!"

"That's not all," he said. "I can build a side canoe in two days; a better one than can be made from those small birches."

When, a day later, Mr. Ramill came limping after Huxby to the smoke-marked camp, Lilith was still hanging moose meat on alder poles over the smudge-fire.

Huxby dropped his full-stuffed knapsack and wiped his sweaty forehead with the back of his hand.

"Pah! To think I've lugged all that old meat, and he's killed again. Why didn't he come back and tell me?"

The girl gave him an odd glance. "We've been too busy, old dear. Where's the blanket?"

"I couldn't pack everything. If I'd known, I could have left this confounded smoked moose and brought the blanket instead."

"Why not have left your load of metal? Didn't you consider that Dad and I will get far more than fifteen thousand dollars' worth of comfort out of that blanket?"

His lips tightened. "Sorry, darling. The thought of a common dirty blanket as against all the platinum—I did not even think of it. Now of course I realize. But it's too late."

"Yes," she agreed, "it's too late. Dad, you were a real sport not to wait for Alan to come back and carry you."

The millionaire had slumped down to rub his swollen ankle. He looked up at Huxby, with a bantering smile. "We couldn't permit our girl to elope with a woods vagabond, could we, Vivian?"

The engineer did not smile. His face went blank. "Where is that roughneck, Lilith?"

"Down in the willows, working hard for us. Won't you be glad when we're rid of him!"

"Won't you?"

"Well, I'm not so sure as I was. At present he is far more agreeable company than you are."

Huxby stiffened and went off towards the willows without any reply. Mr. Ramill peered up shrewdly at his daughter.

"That was pretty hard even from you, Lilith. Try to keep in mind how matters will stand as soon as we get out of this damnable mess. Remember that Vivian is my partner in the profits of all our Northwest Territory deals. Garth is responsible for our being marooned in this woods hell. He set the plane adrift to go to smash over those falls."

For a long moment Lilith Ramill stood silent. She looked down at her grimy tattered sports suit, at her bloodsmeared hands and broken finger nails. The dimmed glitter of the diamond in her engagement ring failed to hold her gaze. It passed on down to her foxskin leggings and moosehide moccasins.

"Squaw," she murmured. "Dirty squaw! He certainly has put us through the mill. And more to come! We're not yet out of the woods. Dad, do you still have Vivian's pistol?"

"Why, no. He asked me for it this morning. Said that the less weight I carried, the better for me."

She reached down a hand to help him to his feet.

"Listen, Dad. No matter how much we hate Alan Garth, we'll never get out of the muskegs without him. Haven't you noticed Vivian's eyes? You must ask him to give you back the pistol."

"But—it's his. And to rasp his self-esteem with such an intimation of distrust—"

"What's more important—his feelings or Alan's guidance—if anything happens to Alan— Make some excuse."

Mr. Ramill got to his feet and limped beside her down to the stream bank. Huxby stood with his morose gaze fixed upon Garth, who was tying willow ribs on the gunwale of his canoe frame with rawhide thongs.

The millionaire spoke in a casual tone: "How long will it take to put on the birch bark?"

"We'll use the moose hides, sir. They weigh more but will be much stronger. You might ask Huxby to chop down a birch and cut it into five-foot lengths. We'll have to split the wood to make paddles."

"So?" Mr. Ramill turned to his prospective son-in-law. "You may as well return the pistol to me, Vivian.

"Squaw," She Murmured. "Dirty Squaw!"

It will hamper your chopping, and as we're now to be in a canoe, its weight will not bother me."

Huxby sat motionless, taken aback. Before he could think of an excuse to refuse, he met Garth's coolly inquiring gaze. He turned away and drew the pistol from inside his tattered coat, with a show of careless indifference. In the same offhand manner, he picked up the belt-ax and went to hack at the base of the nearest birch tree.

Another day saw the canoe complete. The cow and bull hides, gummed and sewn together, formed the cover, hair side in. The result was a craft large enough for the party but shorter and broader than the average canoe.

At Garth's suggestion, Lilith had begun tanning the calfskin. Mr. Ramill tended the smudge-fire. After cutting the birch billets, Huxby had at first sat around brooding. Then, suddenly, he went off up the brook. He did not come back until after the canoe was finished. But he brought the abandoned blanket.

Garth was beginning to shape into paddles the slabs of wood that he had rived from the birch billets. He glanced from the blanket to the clouds overhead, and from them to Lilith's tattered skirt.

"Not half bad, Huxby. That blanket will soon be needed. Too splendid a sunrise this morning. We're in for a storm. Miss Ramill, that calfskin is cured enough for you to wear. Make a skirt of it."

"How about Vivian's shoes?" she asked. "He's walking on his uppers."

"He's welcome to my old moccasins. They may last out our portages."

Though Huxby's ears reddened, he accepted the castoff footgear of the man from whom he had sought to bilk a claim worth at least a million dollars. He could not refuse. His thick shoe soles had scuffed through on the rocks that the pliant rawhide moccasins passed over with slight wear.

When Garth launched the canoe, he fastened it to the bank with a line made from the trimmings of the moose hides. For anchor he used the wolfskin knapsack with its weight of platinum alloy.

"May as well make it useful," he met Huxby's look of moody protest. "You are to have the bow seat, and so can continue to guard my 60 per cent, along with—"

A clap of thunder and the swish of a wind gust through the birch tops checked Garth's banter. He spoke a quick order: "Leanto the blanket on that knoll between the trees, front this way."

A glance at the onrushing black clouds of the thunderstorm sent even Huxby hurrying to help the others. While they tied the upper corners of the blanket with rawhide thongs and weighted the back edge with logs, Garth pulled the canoe ashore and placed it bottom up over the smoke racks.

When, three hours later, the crashing thunderstorm passed over and the heavy downpour of rain ceased, all the party were wet from the drip through the blanket. But the fire still smoldered and the half-smoked meat was dry under the canoe.

"Had you been used to canoeing," Garth said, "we need not have lost all this time. But you'll get enough drenchings later on. Wring out the blanket and fetch the meat."

He launched the canoe again, unaided, and directed the others to their places. All had to kneel, facing the narrower prow of the double-stemmed craft. First came Huxby, with his wolfskin treasure bag for knee-pad. Lilith knelt on the front part of the lengthwise folded blanket. Her father had the end of the blanket behind her. At the wobble of the unsteady craft, he squatted back on his heels and clutched the gunwales.

The others held to willow branches while Garth loaded in the meat behind his own place. He stepped aboard and began to paddle with a steady stroke that sent the canoe gliding out into the swamp stream.

A paddle lay beside each of the others. Lilith was first to dip hers overside. At a murmured word from her, Huxby followed suit. Both of them had done a bit of amateur canoeing at the fashionable beaches. They were able to start in at once and help a little. But two days passed before Mr. Ramill gained enough balance and assurance to rise on his knees and try stroking his paddle.

Left-Handedness Occurs in Four to Eight Per Cent

There are various theories concerning left-handedness, some believing it a matter of heredity, others claiming it is due to instinct or socially acquired habit. The percentage of left-handedness among normal individuals is estimated to run from 4 to 8 per cent, says a writer in the Detroit News. Statistics published by the Journal of Heredity have shown that in families with one or both parents left-handed, a much higher percentage of the children are left-handed. Authorities have told child behavior experts that the nervous systems of left-handed persons are attuned to left-sided makeup in which the left eye dominates. To attempt a distortion of this makeup by forcing the person into right-handed action results in throwing the whole nervous system out of balance, and the child may be made "irritable, pugnacious, seclusive and tending toward theft, lying and tantrums." On the other hand, if left to work out their own left-handed destinies, these persons are fully as bright as any right-handed person. Another authority has shown that when the naturally preferred left hand is interfered with, as is often done, the general dominance of that hand is not affected by the change but may be strengthened by this action.

Bridal Beads

When the Borneo maiden becomes a bride her gown has no graceful train or entrancing veil. Instead she dresses herself in a bead garment of bathing-suit proportions. The Borneo bride is decidedly decollete, for her bridal array covers her body only from below the armpits to the knees. Her costume for this momentous occasion is decorated solely with beads, which cover the entire gown and form designs of native origin. The hem of the dress is decorated with a long fringe.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Boarded Wrong Ships

When the American revolution broke out Britain's admiralty offered a large money reward and three years' exemption from service to any of her seamen who embarked on board an American ship and made themselves masters of her. Unfortunately for Britain, Englishmen who sought for the rewards did not always trouble to distinguish between American and French ships, inflaming France and hastening France's alliance with America.

The Oldest Plow

What is believed to be the oldest plow in the world is exhibited at the Provincial museum, Hanover. A wooden plow discovered on a moor in West Friesland, it affords an interesting insight into the agricultural methods employed in lower Saxony in prehistoric times. Its age is estimated to be between 5,000 and 6,000 years.

Indians Stage a Rally; Population on Increase

The records of the United States government show that in 1865 there were 294,574 Indians on reservations. In 1891, the number had dropped to 246,834, but, after that low point, the Indian brought his total population up to 320,454 in 1933.

The total number of Indians in the United States and Canada today is 443,365, or more than half the number estimated to have roamed the continent before the coming of the white man.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

NOW WHOSE OX IS GORED!

A few years ago this country of ours was treated to a series of passionate upbraidings of those who were assailing the Hoover administration.

The spokesmen of that administration over the radio, in the halls of Congress, in the newspapers and in the magazines, were bitterly denouncing what they termed the campaign to "smear Hoover."

Just as strenuously did the men who were conducting the Democratic side of that controversy protest that there was no slander of the then President, that the attacks were on his policies and not on him personally, etc.

It is a curious manifestation of the whirligig of politics that these same men are now in charge of a campaign in which they are the allies instead of the assailants of the Republican organization and their target is now a Democratic instead of a Republican President.

It is interesting to turn back to the fine speeches made by Mr. Jouette Shouse, present President of the American Liberty League, and to read such stirring paragraphs as: "Never has the party in power been so demoralized, so divided, never has the rift been wider than it is now between those members of the party who are striving for progress in government and politics and the dominating faction that has for generations directed it in the interest of privileged corporations and individuals to the detriment of liberty and prosperity of the average citizen."

Now who do you suppose he was thinking of when he spoke of privileged corporations and individuals behind the Hoover administration? Perhaps the answer may be found in the roster and directory of the Liberty League, with the heads of war munition corporations, holding company chiefs, and the rest of the noble band that are now in the midst of their crusade to save the country from Democracy.

FIRE PREVENTION

By Chief A. P. Chesney

All these things could be done if there were no fires and if the money were available for constructive use, rather than for merely replacing property destroyed by fire each year.

It should be realized, too, that the fire toll includes some ten thousand lives annually, plus injuries to seventeen thousand people, to which must be added the cost of maintaining highly equipped fire departments and augmented water supplies for extinguishing purposes.

Since this latter expense is believed to approximate the loss by fire, America's aggregate bill amounts to about a billion dollars annually, without allowing for losses due to business interruption, loss of wages and other incidentals due to fire destruction.

The waste of human life and material wealth chargeable to fire is staggering in its proportions and unless the people of the United States awake to existing conditions and combine to remedy them, the ultimate result will be serious.

A LECTURE ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Following are excerpts from a lecture entitled "Christian Science: The Science of Reality," delivered by Hon. William E. Brown, C. S. B., in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, South San Francisco, on Tuesday evening of this week: Mr. Brown said:

I think that we shall all agree that the ultimate goal of all education, study, and research is to acquire the ability to discriminate between the real and the unreal, or that which is true and that which is untrue; in other words, to become conscious of reality.

Weary with fruitless search for the truth concerning human existence, confused and troubled, mortals have felt as did Pope, who wrote of mortal man:

"Chaos of thought and passion, all confused; . . .
Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurled,—
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world."

Christ Jesus

As Christ Jesus is the founder and great expositor of Christianity, and since his religion is the sole foundation of Christian Science, it will be helpful to consider the nature of his teaching and practice. Concerning that which is real in this connection Mrs. Eddy writes (Science and Health, p. 269): "The testimony of the material senses is neither absolute nor divine. I therefore plant myself unreservedly on the teachings of Jesus, of his apostles, of the prophets, and on the testimony of the Science of Mind." The mission of Christ Jesus is best set forth in his own words, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." It remained for Mrs. Eddy to interpret the spiritual meaning of this text and to show mortals how to apply this truth in the destruction of sin, disease, and death. This, indeed, is the mission of the Christian Science textbook, to set forth and explain the words and works of the Master.

A careful reading of the words of Jesus clearly indicates two helpful things: first, he made it quite plain that he of himself could do nothing and that his ability to abolish mortal discord came through a spiritual understanding of God; and then he made it equally plain that all who desire to follow him must acquire his understanding and use it as he did. Of this he said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also."

With clear and convincing logic Mrs. Eddy points out that the seeming cause of all sickness is fear, ignorance, or sin, and then she offers humanity her demonstrable remedy, Christian Science. This Science teaches mortals how to overcome fear, ignorance, and sin through an understanding of infinite Love, intelligence, and law.

It is important to note that the healing which occurs under Christian Science treatment is entirely different in nature and quality from that of any other kind; it does not employ hypnotism, suggestion, or the human will in any way.

Matter

In the year 1866, Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, declared for the allness of God and the nonexistence of matter. By a word consciousness steeped in materially this great discovery was not understood and hence became a target for ridicule and misrepresentation. Mrs. Eddy, reasoning from the Scriptual premise of the allness of God, infinite Spirit, was forced to the conclusion that infinite Spirit must necessarily express itself in a spiritual universe and that it must all be spiritual in its nature, not part Spirit and part matter.

It is interesting to know that after a half century of ridicule the leading material scientists are now, in substance, agreeing with Mrs. Eddy's original announcement concerning the nonexistence of matter. The modern physicists are teaching that what is termed matter is, in the last analysis, an expression of energy. As there is no action apart from Mind this is equivalent to declaring that matter is mental in its cause and nature; or, as the philosophers say, made of mind-stuff, and this is exactly what Mrs. Eddy said in 1866. In other words, Mrs. Eddy led the world's foremost thinkers and scientists by approximately half a century.

After a delightful evening tempting refreshments were served to about fifty guests.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"O Lord, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth." These words from Isaiah comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, January 26, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Truth." Included among the Scriptual selections will be: "Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice" (John 18: 37).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will laso be included: "Eternal Truth is changing the universe. As mortals drop off their mental swaddling-clothes, thought expands into expression. 'Let there be light,' is the perpetual demand of Truth and Love, changing chaos into order and discord into the music of the spheres" (p. 255).

SHOCK ABSORBERS

Many cars would ride and perform better if the shock absorbers were adjusted and functioning properly.

At least once each season they should be serviced and adjusted by a competent mechanic.

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

(By Rev. Miles Dawson)

The First Baptist Church of Little Falls, New York, recently celebrated the Four Hundredth Anniversary of the printed English Bible. In one of the services of observance, a unique and impressive part was taken by several members of the congregation. Portions of the Bible were read aloud in Hebrew, English (in unison), Ukrainian, Slovakian, Latin, French, German, Spanish Greek, Danish, Italian, Polish, and Russian.

The junior choir sang "Jesus Loves Me" in the Indian tongue of the Telegu.

It is not accident or superstition that makes the Bible the greatest selling book year after year not only throughout the world, but in America as well. Today the Bible is read in 954 languages and dialects, 12 different tongues in China alone, the latest translation being for an obscure mid-Pacific island.

We can say of this Book what David said of Goliath's sword, "There is none like it, give it to me."

HOME TEAM LOSES LEAGUE FINALE

Errors Costly To Home Club In Well Contested Three Hit Game

(By Al Gould)

Two costly misplays behind brilliant pitching of Davies and Petrocchi sent the home team down to defeat in the final game of the Recreation "AA" league.

In the third inning, De Camp, first up for the Meat boys, went out, Vasquez to Musante. Davies could not locate the plate and walkel Zelis. Godsby sent a fly to center, which "Old Man" Hawley misjudged, sending Zelis home and giving him three bases. Hailer singled, scoring Godsby. Bauzon walked. Sorriva and Maggioncalde fanned to retire the side. Two runs, one hit, and one costly error.

In the ninth inning, Godsby went out, Petrocchi to Musante. Hailer was given a life when Palmini threw the ball away on an easy play. Banzon was given a life when Umpire Whitaker got in the way of Palmini to make the play at first. Sorriva forced Bauzon at second, but advanced Hailer to third. At this stage Manager Barnard elected to pinch hit for Maggioncalde; he singled to short left and the winning run went over the plate. On run, oe hit, ad one error.

While this game does not change the result of the league standing inso-far as the home club is concerned, the breaks in Sunday's game gave the Meat boys a chance for second money.

The box score will tell the tale of this unearned victory.

MOTORISTS ARE THE REAL KEY TO TRAFFIC TOLL

"Sound traffic laws and their vigilant enforcement will go a long way, but in the final analysis, safety on our streets and highways depends upon the active co-operation of every person who operates a motor vehicle."

This was the opinion of the manager of the Mission Auto Co., Chrysler-Plymouth dealer here, in reference to the legislative measures now being discussed in many states that would prohibit the use of motor vehicles making more than 40 miles per hour.

"These laws could be easily circumvented by "bootleg" mechanics," he said. The real key to decreasing our yearly toll of traffic accidents lies in bringing every motorist and pedestrian to a full realization of the importance of safety.

"For many years past, leading manufacturers have adopted every possible safety factor as speedily as it was developed. But they cannot control the mental equipment of the man behind the wheel."

He pointed out that some of the advances toward greater safety have been: 4-wheel hydraulic brakes; all-steel safety bodies; low center of gravity; safety glass; full-vision windshields; anti-glare headlamps and redistribution of weight.

EVERY home has its arctic zones these cold mornings and evenings. So often in the bathroom, breakfast nook or corner bedroom there are chilly spots that would even make a polar bear thermometer-minded. These cold spots vanish when you plug in the efficient, portable electric heater.

"Turning on winter sunshine" is what more than 100,000 California families call these handy electric heaters. With electric heat you can dress in comfort, warm your body and your clothes in the mornings. You can thaw out the bathroom while you bathe and shave. TUCK A SMART BOW BENEATH THE CHIN

PATTERN 9601

Surely no Junior Miss can resist the girlishness of this smart two-piece frock. Practical for school in a washable cotton tweed, or dressy enough for an evening date in one of the new metallic-shot woolens, with velveteen bow and belt. Isn't the cut of the shoulder line unusual? The blouse, with darts front and back, is separate, you know, so its pleated skirt may accompany many different blouses.

Pattern 9601 may be ordered only in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12 requires 2⅛ yards 54 inch fabric and ½ yard 5 inch ribbon. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 W. Eighteenth St. New York, N. Y.

Skeletons in Armor Suits Are Found on Battle Site

Skeletons fully arrayed in medieval armor have been found in excavations in the vicinity of Venice, all in a perfect state of preservation. Workers engaged on excavations for the new great canal which is under construction in the picturesque district surrounding Stra, came across what undoubtedly must have been the scene of a great battle in the days of the ancient Venetian republic.

One of the many skeletons in armor was found to have a sword still between the ribs. Presumably the man fell in battle and has lain undisturbed all these centuries. Quantities of ancient weapons and armor also were found, together with beautifully modeled vases which, when the centuries old dirt had been washed away, were found to be painted by hand with designs and figures, the colors being perfectly preserved.

Bashful Irishman Offers Lady Friend a Rare Treat

Some time ago a young Irish farmer in the County Kilkenny was very much in love. He wanted to marry the girl, but being a shy lad he couldn't for the life of him ask her outright to marry him. He felt he would choke if he tried to mention the words marry or marriage to her. So, after taking much earnest, shrewd thought on the problem, he asked her in a whisper one evening:

"Julia, how would you like to be buried with my people?"—Chicago Tribune.

BE CAREFUL WHEN DRIVING AT SUNSET

Records from a score of cities prove that the most dangerous time of the day for both pedestrians and motorists is at dusk. During the twilight hours there is neither enough daylight nor sufficient artificial light to make objects distinguishable at ordinary distances.

This is the hour, too, when motorists are most likely to find children playing in the streets.

No matter how carefully you drive, exert just a little extra caution during this most dangerous time of the day.

Thoroughly schooled in banking fundamentals before he was tall enough to see through a teller's window, L. M. Giannini, president of Bank of America, combines his heritage of the financier's sound judgment with the cool,, analytical logic of the attorney.

Giannini, who was born in San Francisco, November 25, 1894, completed his scholastic education at the Hastings College of Law and was admitted to the bar in 1920, but it was not ordained that the son of A. P. Giannini, founder of the Bank of America system, should practice law. Even before he finished his preparatory school work he began to follow in the footsteps of his father.

Reared in a family where every waking thought centered upon banking and finance were the constant topic of conversation, L. M. Giannini assimilated a great fund of knowledge on general banking practice during his boyhood. From the time he could add and subtract he was the honored visitor and ardent student of the tellers and cashiers in the institutions founded by "A. P." Consequently, when he went on the payroll of Bank of Italy officially, in 1918, his duties as a clearing clerk were easily assumed.

After a year he was promoted to the credit department. From there, by gradual stages, he moved through all phases of the bank's operations. As director of the Personnel Department, he achieved an intimate knowledge of the institution's employes, and their affairs and their problems still are much with him. His interest in the personal relations of the bank staff led him to sponsor such innovations as the Bankamerica Club, through which social and athletic activities are fostered; the employes bonus and pension funds; and the "Suggestion Committee," through which a constructive idea conceived by the most obscure employe may reach the attention of the bank's chief executives.

In 1928, L. M. Giannini, or "L. M.," as he is known to the Bank of America organization, became vice chairman of the board of directors and a member of the general executive committee of the bank. In February of 1930 he succeeded his father as president of Transamerica Corporation.

During the next two years, powerful Eastern interests made their influence felt on Transamerica. Bolstered by heavy stock ownership, they sought to inaugurate policies which Mario Giannini could not countenance. He resigned the presidency of the corporation, and was instrumental in launching and successfully concluding the fight to return control of Transamerica to California hands.

On February 15, 1932, the battle was won. Having already served as president of Transamerica, and being convinced that great possibilities for future institutional development lay with Bank of America, Mario Giannini became senior vice president of the branch banking institution. In 1935 he was elected president of Bank of America (California), and on January 14, 1936, he became president of Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association.

L. M. Giannini is chairman of the general executive committee of Transamerica Corporation and president of Occidental Life Insurance Company. He is a director of the California State Chamber of Commerce.

COUNTY WILL SAVE LARGE SUM BY NEW PLAN

Board Of Supervisors Endorse Plan To Effect Elimination Of Considerable Expense.

until his return, as both matters concern his district.

The board unanimously approved a plan worked out by County Purchasing Agent Stanley Kelly and County Treasurer A. G. Sagehorn, whereby the county will effect an annual saving of $2500 paid on a premium for a $1,000,000 "return of security bond."

Kelly explained that when the county deposits cash in the various county banks, the banks must give security in the form of bonds, which have been kept in the county treasurer's vault. The amount of these bonds sometimes held on hand total a large sum, Kelly said, and their keeping is a great risk, necessitating the $1,000,000 insurance policy to assure their return to the banks when the county money is withdrawn.

They now will be distributed to trust departments of banks and the responsibility for their safe-guarding will be shifted from the county to the banks. The plan will not involve the county in any expense.

The supervisors voted to skip next week's session and convene again on Monday, February 3.
